PLAN ADDITION TO HI. SCHOOL

TO DISCUSS ENLARGEMENT OF SEQUOIA HIGH SCHOOI

The Sesuoia high school building, erected five years ago, and designed at that time to care for the growth of the school for several years, has, due to the rapidly increased enrollment, become overcrowded. The building is used at the present time to its capacity, and according to a forecast made by the board of trustees of the institution, will be well overcrowded with the opening of the spring semester.

Plans for enlarging the schoo by the addition of another wing in the rear of the main building have been discussed by the board and a meeting of representative citizens from various parts of the district is scheduled for this evening at the high school. The matter will be discussed by this committee, and if the committee favors the construction of the additional wing, a bond issue will probably be placed before the people to be voted upon.

The enrollment at the high school is now 717 and an increase of 90 is expected during the year. This will make the enrollment at the end of the year almost a hundred over that of last year. The total enrollment in 1897, just thirty years ago was only 45, and in 1917 was less than two hundred. The high school, as well as other institutions of learning has enjoyed a wonderful development during the past few years.

LOCAL COUPLE WILL MARRY HERE SUNDAY

The Methodist church in this city will be the scene Sunday afternoon of a pretty wedding service when Mrs. Lida Ruth Medefind will become the bride of Herbert W. Treichel. The wedding service will be performed by Rev. Winning, pastor of the church. Miss Adelina Hall, sister of the bride, will attend Mrs. Medefind and T. Cuthbertson of San Francisco, will attend the groom.

Mrs. B. L. Davis of Palo Alto will sing "I Love You Truly," and "Because," while Mrs. Carl Fisher will accompany her at the organ. A reception for relatives will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hall, parents of the bride on Pine street after the wedding.

Mrs. Medefind is one of the best known and popular young woman of the community. She is an enthusiastic member of the Methodist church and has for years been an active worker in that organization. She is also active in fraternal organizations and is a past noble grand of the local Rebekah lodge. Mrs. Medefind is also a talented musician and her accomplishment on the organ and piano as well as her vocal ability are in demand at church, lodge and social events.

The groom-to-be is a more recent member of this community, and oddly enough, the church in which he will be married on Sunday was the cause of his coming here. He is a contractor and builder and came here to supervise the construction of the new Methodist church. Cuthbertson, who will act as his best man, was the contractor of the building. Since the completion of the church, Treichel has remained in Redwood City, where he has made many friends.

County Superintendent Schools Pansy Jewett Abbott spent the week at Coronado attending the state convention of school executives. Roy W. Cloud, formerly county superintendent, and now executive secretary of the California State Teachers' Association, was also present at the convention.

Credit Topic At Meeting Of Merchants

Credit, the foundation upon which the superstructure of business is erected, and at the same time when unwisely used, a menace to the whole commercial edifice, was the subject of an interesting address before the meeting of the Redwood City merchants' Association held at the city hall Wednesday evening. The speaker was Carl Wagner, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Italy.

Wagner urged the merchants to insist upon curtailing the credit which they extend to thirty days. Any account carried more than thirty days was a losing proposition to the merchant, Wagner stated, and any person who allowed his bills to run over thi. period was using the merchant's money without any compensation to him. No bank could long exis by doing business in this manner The merchants should receive interest upon their money, represented by merchandise as well as the bank, and those who receive bills stating that after a certain time the account will bear interest, should not feel hurt, Wagner stated.

The merchant must get his money back, Wagner explained if he would take his discounts from the wholesale stores, and a merchant who cannot save his discounts would be better at a pick and shovel job.

Wagner's address was much appreciated by the merchants and evoked considerable discussion among them as to credit conditions in the various lines of business.

An important matter which wa discussed was the question of attendance at the meetings of the Merchants Association. A resolution was passed to the effect tha the association should meet twice a month at a luncheon meeting. It was also decided to charge the members $1.20 a month in advance for the meals, as it was thought that this plan, already used by the service clubs of the town, would result in a greater attendance at the meetings. Any business, it was stated, should justify this expenditure, as much good results from the meetings of the merchants to discuss their problems.

DELAY ACTION MENLO PARK INCORPORATION

A preliminary hearing on the petition of Menlo Park for in corporation as a city of the sixth class was given by the board o supervisors at its regular meeting Monday morning, but was continued one week for final action The matter was brought before the board by Attorney Joseph Gordon, representing the incorporationists, who filed with the board the petition signed by 54 residents of the property proposed to be incorporated.

The description of the property was read by County Clerk Elizabeth Kneese while Deputy Surveyor Earl Wilsey showed upon a wall map the boundaries of the territory proposed to be incorporated.

Two protests were received by the board, one from Roger Reynolds, and one from Olive H. Palmer, each asking that the protestant's property be excluded both are owners of large unsubdivided tracts. Attorney Gordon explained that the incorporationists expected to exclude these pieces and other pieces of acreage before the election, but had includd them in the description in expectation that the owner might petition to be included.

The three circulators of the petition, Joshua J. Harcum, Edward E. Quayle and Franklin B Cain were present and after being sworn were asked the customary questions concerning their petition by Attorney Gordon.

Chairman John W. Poole of the board of supervisors asked if any person present desired to protest. There was none. Supervisor Hickey than asked that the county engineer be asked to prepare a new description of th property eliminating all acreage This was done and after the board had instructed County Engineer Kneese as to the desired boundaries be prepared and amended map of the proposed district.

Friends Honor Miss E. L. Falvey

At the close of business on Tuesday afternoon the clerks in the office of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese repaired to the basement of the courthouse where a supmtous repast awaited them. The affair was under the auspices of the pretty clerks and in honor of the chief deputy Miss Elinor Falvey, who on Monday passed the bar examination and became a full fledged lawyer. The tables were laden with dainties of the season. The color scheme was blue, a large bunch of blue astors adorned the festive board while streamers of snap dragons hung in clusters about the ceiling. A neat box appropriately decorated was placed in front of the plate of the popular and efficient chief deputy. On being requested to open it she dis covered a valuable necklace composed of priceless rose quartz stones, the gift of the young ladies and gentlemen in her office as a token of their appreciation of her kindness to them and in honor of the achievement of Mis. Falvey in successfully passing the bar examination. Miss Falvey was too overcome by emotion to make any extended speech, but in a few words thanked the donors of the precious gift.

Webb Bay Bridge Issue Dies a Natural Death

A fund of fireworks which John J. McGrath of San Mateo came to the meeting of the board of supervisors Monday prepared to hurl at the proposed Webb bridge from a point near Candlestick Point in this county to a point in Alameda county proved to be unnecessary. The matter died peacefully and naturally without outside assistance.

Monday was the date advertised for the hearing on the application of Frank Elbridge Webb for a franchise to construct a bridge across the bay between the above points. The notice of intention of Webb to appear and apply for a franchise at 11 o'clock was read by the clerk, but as Webb had not appeared to seek the franchise at 12 o'clock the matter was declared dead.

McGrath appeared to protes against the granting of the franchise, but as Webb was not present to request it the board declared that the matter was automatically disposed of and tha the protest was unnecessary.

DEATH CALLS OLD PIONEER

The passing of August D. Jenevein at his home in San Bruno on Monday last removes a county pioneer who figured prominently in the early history of the peninsula, and who was known by thousands throughout the state. For over fifty years he had resided in the north end of the county, and in the days of political conventions was a power in politics.

As a young man he was employed by Uncle Tom who then conducted the famous resort known as Uncle Tom's Cabin located on the main county road leading from San Jose to San Francisco at San Bruno. He afterwards became proprietor of the place.

Uncle Tom was a widely known chef employed by Jack Gamble who in 1876 conducted the resort under the name of Star and Garter. It was a well-known road house patronized by the leading sporting men of those times who came from San Francisco for dinners and spent hundreds of dollars during a night. Many a cold bottle and hot bird were enjoyed there by the sporting element, many of whom would reach the resort with spirited teams of horses over the San Bruno turnpike along the route of the Bay Shore highway, a toll road and now used by the Southern Pacific railroad.

Jack Gamble was a noted gambler and sportsman and at his death left the resort to Uncle Tom, his faithful cook, and the latter changed the name of the place to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a name it has been known by ever since. On the death of Uncle Tom, Mr. Jenevein became the proprietor and conducted it with profit for many years. Under the management of Jenevein the place was frequented by all the politicions of the county. It became the healquarters for such men as Senator Felton, Supervisor Green W. H. Lawrence, James D. Brynes and other well known politicians of those times. Jesse Potter, one of the heirs of the Miller & Lux Company, meat barons, is said to have spent a fortune there in a single night.

Jenevein before he sold th place to Thomas Klink acquired the property opposite the resort forming the gore roads leading to San San Francisco by the old San Jose thoroughfare and the bay shore route. He held the property making a fortune on it

Jenevein was a supporter of Supervisor Green of the Firs township for many years but in the campaign of 1892 he got out of step with the supervisor and aided the late Jacob Bryan o Colma and the latter was elected defeating the veteran supervisor by a small vote. Green never for gave Jenevein for this.

Jenevein was well known in the north end for over a half a century, always taking an active interest in politics and civic affairs. The funeral on Wednesday was largely attended by nearly all the old timers of the county. Jenevin was the last of the old pioneers of the first township.

This will be the first use of airplanes for rum scouting in the history of California prohibition enforcement, Bohner said.

State traffic officers are to be returned to their motorcycles by an order issued last week by Frank G. Snook, chief of the state division of motor vehicles. During the past few years, Snook pointed out, there has been a tendency for the traffic police to forsake motorcycles for touring cars. The practice became so general that when Snook became motor vehicle chief nearly half of the traffic force were driving automobiles. Snook believes that the use of the motor cars has impaired the efficiency of the squad, particularly in view of the fact that the automobiles driven by many of the officers are incapable of matching speed with some of the more powerful cars they are called upon to pursue.

In order to decrease the number of accidents on the State highways the Railroad Commission announced its intention last week of adding a new general order to its code, covering auto stage passenger operators. The new order will require all stage operators to wire or telegraph the Railroad Commission immediately after accidents on their lines have occured. Directly after they have finished complying with the requirement they also will be compelled to submit a written report describing the accident in detail. These two stipulations in the order will enable the commission to institute an immediate investigation of highway accidents all over the State.

Hot weather made the outdoor community swimming pool at Brawley, Imperial Valley so uncomfortable that the city council decided to come to the relief of swimmers by having five tons of ice dumped into the pool.

Actual taxable wealth in the city of Oakland was set at $335,703,620 last week in a resolution made by the City Council for the information of the financial market. The figure was computed from Alameda county assessment rolls for 1927-28, and is the so-called "true value" that bears a 10 to 3 ratio to the assessed valuation.

Plans for what will probably be the best-equipped seismometer station in the world for the recording of local and distant earthquakes, have just been completed at the University of California as the result of a $10,000 gift by F. W. Bilgar, Oakland paving contractor. The seismometer station will be located 40 feet underground and will be reached by a tunnel 100 feet long. The purpose of the project is aid in the eventual acquisition of enough information about earthquakes to enable scientists to predict their coming and also their probable strength.

California's greatest highway traffic for a given area is in the nine counties of the San Francisco Bay district, State Highway Engineer Robert M. Morton announced last week as a result of the State's latest traffic count taken at 700 selected points. The census also showed that 25 per cent of each week's traffic throughout the State generally comes on Sunday.

Kern River district, one of the oldest producers of oil in California, continues to put forth the greatest effort in development of new wells as indicated in the weekly report of the state oil and gas supervisor. During the past week, five new holes, were begun there while one other well was spudded in near Buttonwillow in wildcat territory.

Operating revenues for the entire system of all public utilities operating in the state of California during 1926 aggregated $1,001,170,243.26, as compared with $955,250,075.80 for 1925, an increase of $45,940,167.46, according to the annual report of the Department of Finance and Accounts of the Railroad Commission just compiled by W. C. Fankhauser, financial expert of the commission.

How long will it take to motor over all the roads in California? This casual inquiry coming usually from out-of-state tourists brings vague answers. Figures of existing roads in this state, compiled by the California State Automobile Association, show that a motorist traveling 200 miles a day would require 385 days to traverse every road once. The total mileage is 77,000. Should the motorist decide to make the trip merely over the state highway system, the tour could be accomplished in approximately 33 days as the total state system is 6,594 miles.

Ducks, geese, jacksnipe and mudhens will be the lawful prey of nimrods, starting October 1, until the 15th of January. After a miserable season last year, in which the shooting was the poorest in general ever known to the state, the sportsmen are hoping for a better year.

Allocation of San Diego destroyers at various Superior California ports for Navy Day, October 27th, was announced last week by Rear Admiral Luke McNamee, destroyer force commander. The ships will be distributed as follows. Benicia, destroyer Moody; Martinez, destroyer Hull; Eureka, destroyers William Jones and J. F. Burnes; Crescent City, destroyers Farragut and Thompson.

Congressman Charles F. Curry's proposed national legislation pledging the Federal government to stand one-third of the $51,000,000 cost of Northern California's flood control project was last week declared "fair and reasonable" by Congressman John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, Republican floor leader in the House of Representatives. Congressman Tilson completed a tour of the flood control districts last week. Under Congressman Curry's bill the State government, the Federal government and the land owners would each stand one-third of the total expense of flood control work.

Chico, Butte County, has been assured of the construction in the city limits of a powdered milk and by-products plant which will use, 60,000 pounds fo raw milk a day, the product of 2,500 dairy cows. This is the announcement made by S. L. Bainbridge, city councilman and president of the Chico Real Estate Board. The plant will be ready for operation and contracts will be signed by dairymen by January 15th. It will represent an investment of about $40,000. It is estimated that the cash returned to farmers will approximate $33,000 per month.

A substantial growth in commerce and industry in California for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1927, is shown by figures compiled by the statistician of the state banking department. In making a general estimate of progress throughout the state the figures for total resources of banks operating in the state were used as a general guide to the progress of commerce and industry. The figure for June 30, 1926, was $3,706,466,000, which represented an increase of $214,081,000 over the previous year or 6.1 per cent. The total for the present year is $3,833,938,000, an increase of $127,492,000 or 3-4 per cent over the total for 1926. This constitutes a lesser gain than that recorded for 1926 but it is nevertheless a very substantial one.

Plans for the San Joaquin County Water Pageant and Regatta to be staged in Stockton October 1 and 2 have gained such momentum that they are requiring the attention of 150 active committeemen. A two-fold purpose behind it, the regatta will serve as a celebration over Federal recognition of the $6,000,000 Stockton deep water project and as a medium for reviving water sports in that city. Stockton, at one time, was one of the leading cities on the Pacific Coast in water sports. Committeemen for the coming regatta will serve as a nucleus for the Stockton Regatta Association which will sponsor annual regattas in that city.

The state-wide epidemic of infantile paralysis, which has been prevalent in California since early Summer, shows no signs of abatement in the number of new cases reported to the state department of public health last week. In that period seventy-one cases were reported, which is only a trifle above the average for the preceding several weeks. Dr. C. H. Halliday, chief epidemiologist of the department, stated last week that in his opinion the peak of the disease has been reached in Superior California, and that succeeding weeks will show a steady decrease.

The automobile tire may take a place alongside pickles as a by-product of California's most popular back-yard fruit, the fig tree, if experiments being conducted by Dr. Frederick Osius prove out the rubber specialist's first findings. Dr. Osius announced last week at Pasadena that rubber in commercial quantities may be obtained from the panache, or French fig, and that the common California varieties, the Kadota and the Adriatic, are being subjected to research processes now. He said he had tapped the milk from the panaches and had produced a fine piece of rubber from it.

THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine, and you can use these facts as a testimonial. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

Old-Timer Has Lively Memory of Blizzard

Memories of the great blizzard of 1888 in South Dakota are still vivid in the mind of James B. Lazear of Omaha, Neb., who was a national bank examiner at that time, according to the Kansas City Star. He had stopped at Pukwana, S. D., on his return from examining a bank in a neighboring town and was warned by a hotel proprietor that a blizzard was on the way.

"For eight days and nights, with the mercury from 15 to 45 below zero, I acted as fireman in my room," related Lazear. "The snow was packed solid to the second story. Toward the last all I had to eat was dried apples. People in the town were enabled to make visits to one another by tunneling under the snow next to the sidewalk. Snow was packed 40 feet deep and so solid in some of the cuts that trains were run by tunneling under the snow. For 30 days trains were run like this. After the storm I drove from Pukwana to Mitchell over the top of the snow. The crust held the two horses, the sleigh and its load with ease. I made the trip of nearly 100 miles safely."

"Merry Andrew"

This was first applied to Andrew Borde, physician to Henry VIII. He was very learned and very eccentric, and in order to instruct the people, he used to address them at fairs and other crowded places. Those who imitated his wit and droll tricks, though not possessing his genius, were called Merry Andrews.

The Veterans Know

THERE is perhaps no organization in this country with a better opportunity and more reason for studying matters of national and international importance than the American Legion. Its members are all citizens of this country, all saw service under its flag in the greatest war of history, many of them lived in and saw other parts of the world during that struggle, and all returned with a firm determination to do all in their power to make other wars unnecessary, at least, as far as this nation is concerned.

Since the time of the armistice the members of the American Legion have kept in touch with the affairs of the nation through their organization, and have been afforded every opportunity to study for themselves and know what policies would be best for the nation for which they risked their lives. It is, therefore, interesting to note the stand which the American Legion has taken in regard to the immigration question, a matter, by the way, integrally connected with the future peace and prosperity of the country.

The American Legion at its convention in Paris this year adopted resolutions unequivocally opposed to any letting down of the bars to aliens and opposed to tampering with the immigration provisions as now in effect.

That an attack upon the National Origins Provision of the Immigration Act of 1924 is being made ready is the opinion of John B. Trevor of New York who writes:

"The representatives of certain foreign blocs and also, I regret to say, persons affiliated with certain religious organizations, have misrepresented the facts of the situation. In fact, I have been advised that an active campaign is now in progress to collect sob stuff stories for the purpose of securing the repeal of the National Origins Provision by inundating Congress with such a mass of sentimental protest as to make the individual members fear a political reaction, should they not accede to the wishes of those directing the campaign against restrictive immigration legislation.

The action of the American Legion was not a hasty retaliation for alien demonstrations in the Sacco-Venzetti case and other like acts of vandalism, nor by the wholesale disregard of our laws by alien residents, but came after mature and ernest reflection.

Where Legislation Fails

"WE CAN NOT," Colonel Roosevelt once said, "legislate a state of mind." This is a point that many sincere law makers have failed to take into account, and the failure has resulted in deplorable morass of legislation. Laws are made to curb this tendency on the part of the people or to make them do something in a different way than in which it has been done. Generally too, the framer of the law is the only one who is perfectly satisfied with it, and it is disregarded and eventually slides into oblivion.

Laws never have nor ever will form public opinion, and unless a law is enforced by public opinion all the machinery of the executive, legislative or judicial departments will not enforce it. Prohibition today is the failure that it is, not because it is not a wise provision, nor because the amendment and its correlative legislation was not well drawn up, nor because of any particular failure on the part of the authorities, but because the people are not ready for prohibition.

The same applied to blue laws and other fanatical measures. They do not change human nature and therefore fail of their purpose.

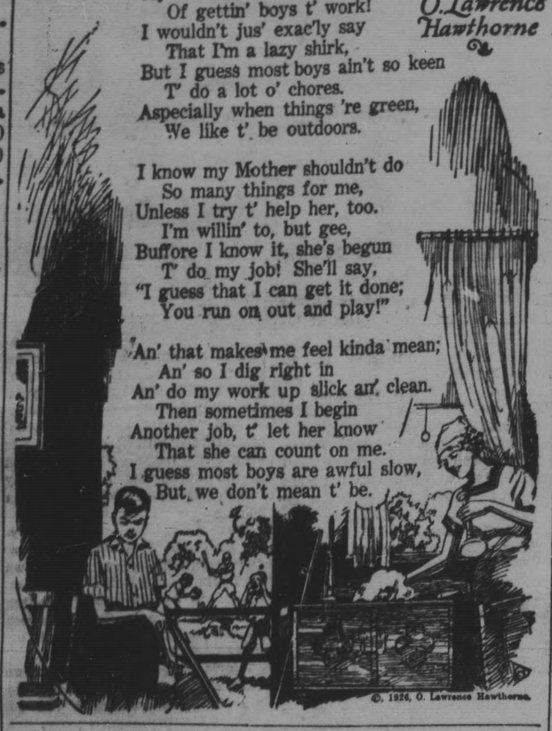
It is a custom among reformers to apply for a law to enforce every whim, and too often, the legislators looking for their own interests, let bills slip through which they know to be unreasonable, in order to avoid antagonizing some element in their constituency. It were better if the reformers would begin at the other end of the matter, make the public ready for the law, get public opinion formed; by then a statute will have become unnecessary, for in the ultimate only one enforecement factor exists, and that is public opinion.

Then, too, laws which are considered necessary at one time become obsolete, but are still retained, they are not enforced and the public comes to have a disrespect for this type of law which is very easily extended to laws in general.

We believe that by their very multiplicity the laws of this country are becoming disregarded and farcial. A few really necessary measures fully enforced would meet a public demand. And more thought to the good of the nation and less for the approaching election on the part of our legislators would be a good beginning to that end.

Helpin' Mother

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne



My Mother has a funny way
Of gettin' boys t' work!
I wouldn't jus' exac'ly say
That I'm a lazy shirk,
But I guess most boys ain't so keen
T' do a lot o' chores.
Especially when things 're green,
We like t' be outdoors.

I know my Mother shouldn't do
So many things for me,
Unless I try t' help her, too.
I'm willin' to, but gee,
Buffore I know it, she's begun
T' do my job! She'll say,
"I guess that I can get it done;
You run on out and play!"

An' that makes me feel kinda mean;
An' so I dig right in
An' do my work up slick an' clean.
Then sometimes I begin
Another job, t' let her know
That she can count on me.
I guess most boys are awful slow,
But we don't mean t' be.

"ARTIFICIAL" HOLDUP LATEST TO RAISE MONEY

Having plenty of money for his employer, the Union Oil Co., but none for himself resulted in Fred W. Voight, service station operator of San Carlos figuring out a scheme which might have worked, but didn't.

After a busy day at the station Voight, according to his confession to the San Mateo police, called up the police station, and while speaking with the station dashed the phone to the floor putting it out of commission. He then beat himself on the head, making a self-inflicted wound. When the police arrived they found Voight appadently unconscious on the floor of the station.

Voight was taken to the Mills Memorial hospital for treatment An investigation was made at the station where it was found that the money from the cash register had disappeared. It was found however, in a pocket of Voight's car. Faced with this evidence Voight confessed to having faked the hold-up, stating that he was behind in his payments on a car and needed the money for this purpose.

Changes In Town Banking

A change in the disposition of the funds of the town of Redwood City was authorized by the board of trustees Monday evening. For the past six months a savings account has been kept at the First National Bank and the commercial account of the town has been at the Bank of Italy City Treasurer B. E. Myers suggested Monday evening that the savings account be used to pay up notes outstanding by the town and amounting to about $8,000. This money was drawing interest at the rate of 4%, Myers stated, while the town was paying 6 % on its outstanding notes.

In order that the finances of the town might not be too unevenly divided after the $8,000 was drawn from the savings account it was suggested that an account be opened at the First National Bank for the payment of all salary warrants and that the Bank of Italy account be used for other expenses of the town.

The First Ntional Bank was also authorized to cash checks drawn upon the Broadway extension account when signed by the three commissioners or a majority of them and countersigned by the city treasurer. This account was formed to meet the preliminary expenses of the extension of Broadway.

Promised Financial Relief for Farmer and Home Owner Is Forecast in Statement

Special to the Times-Gazette
By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, October 6—The farmer appears to be the taxation goat according to Ray L. Riley, state controller, in a statement issued today in which he claims that real property is bearing more than its just share of taxes.

A rainbow of promised financial relief to the farmer and home owner is forecast in his suggestion that sales taxes and an income tax be imposed to equalize the tax burden.

"Land is always there when the assessor cies around and it is inevitably taxed but personal property largely escapes assessment," the state controller declared. "Probably not more than 20 per cent of personal property is taxed at all.

"To offset this a sales tax should be invoked," Riley asserted. "There is no eluding a sale's tax and it is fair in that it is levied on ability to pay, no sales no payment.

Taxation could be rendered more nearly painless in the opinion of the state fiscal officer by using more businesslike methods in the collection of it.

One of Riley's suggestions is to pay taxes at more convenient seasons. In some localities in some lines of business this might be by monthly or quarterly payments, in others it might work out better in one annual lump sum. For instance a dairyman with a monthly cream check might pay in small amounts, a grain farmer might pay his yearly tax when he sold his crop. Under the plan of the controller a taxpayer would not be penalized. A discount would be paid for prompt payment and a graduated penalty would be levied for deferred payment.

"Putting taxation on a business basis," Riley calls it, by keeping a steady flux of tax money coming during the year to meet current governmental expenses instead of demanding it all at once to the inconvenience of business.

Taxation has become such a governmental problem that on the suggestion of Governor C. C. Young the 1927 legislature created a tax commission to study the situation and report remedies to the next legislature.

The Commission appointed to carry on this investigation held its initial meeting at Sacramento last Saturday and appointed the chairman, Irving Martin of Stockton, and Ray L. Riley, temporary secretary, to represent California at the convention of the National Tax Association meeting in Toronto, Canada, on October 13.

The only instruction given the California delegates in taxation matters was "not to support any fundamental change in taxation which would affect this state until the commission had a chance to function." Which in effect is not to favor the repeal of the federal inheritance tax, an issue that is anticipated and that might jeopardize the California inheritance tax from which the state derives approximately $8,000,000 per year in revenue.

Experts will be employed by the Tax Commission to go into the whole matter of taxation in order to arrive at a fundamental change which will broaden the tax base more equitably.

COUNTY VETERANS GET HOMES WITH STATE AID

Special to the Times-Gazette
By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, October 5—California's farm and home aid program for its former service men, under the vigorous administration of Secretary George M. Stout of the Veterans' Welfare Board, has reached the half-way mark.

And the former soldiers and sailors have kept the faith with the state. With few exceptions, these in many cases resulting from illness that followed injuries overseas, the state's veterans are making their payments to the state regularly on the property loans advanced them.

Of the $30,000,000 voted by California in the two veteran bond issues, exactly $15,417,649.80 has been invested in homes and farms to date, according to the board's report. Of the amount expended thus far, $14,286,113 has been used in securing homes for veterans, while $1,130,936.80 represents the investment in farms.

The program is being administered without cost to the state, the men extended the loans repaying the state government in small monthly installments with 5 per cent interest. The veterans' payments, inclusive of interest, average about $33 per month each on a house, or less than the average rental in a city.

Some 3277 service men have received state loans since the program was inaugurated, of whom 3075 purchased homes and the balance farm property.

In San Mateo county 52 veterans have received state purchased homes to date at a cost of $249,450, or an average of $4,797 each. None of the San Mateo county applicants signified a desire to purchase a farm.

In Solano county, however, expenditures for the purchase of farms totaled within a thousand dollars of the home investment. Solano county homes have been purchased to the extent of $19,000, while farm property bought by the state there is valued at $18,000.

Santa Clara, another county where all contracts have been for city property, boasts 81 veterans in state purchased homes. The investment in Santa Clara county to date totals $365,260.

Thirty-four Marin county service men have secured state homes at a cost of $154,050, while one Marin 'vet' is entrenched in a farm bought under the program.

Merced county boasts a state investment in farms and homes of $70,100, of which $46,600 went into the purchase of city property.

Stanislaus county, with $74,450 in homes and $67,664 additional in state purchased farms, is one of the leading counties in the San Joaquin Valley in the veteran aid program is just being initiated 13 farms have been purchased in the county.

In Lassen county, the state program is just being initiated due largely to the tardiness of the far northern veterans in making their applications. Several score applications are now on file from the northern district, however, and purchases probably will be made shortly.

To the south, in San Diego county, the board has invested $377,500 in buying property for service men. Of this sum, $368,400 went into the purchase of homes for 79 men in San Diego county, while $14,100 was invested in farf property.

During the coming 18 months, according to Secretary Stout, the board hopes virtually to complete the program so far as the money available will allow. Investments in practically all sections of the state will be nearly doubled during the period.

"Our experience shows that homes make a far better citizenship and community stability, in addition to aiding a city or county in the way of material development, asserted Stout. "Very few men who have good homes become criminals. And the divorce rate among California veterans who own state phrchased homes is exceedingly low."

"THE WORST IS YET TO COME" Wellington

STATE LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN AGAINST ILLEGAL HEADLIGHTS

In connection with a drive lauched this week by the State Motor Vehicle Division against illegal headlights on motor vehicles, George E. Sanford, general attorney for the California State Automobile Association, this week reviewed the provisions of the law for the benefit of motorists. The campaign is being conducted by Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, in co-operation with the California Public Safety Conference. Sanford's summary follows:

"The fundamental lighting rule is that no device should project a glaring or dazzling light to any person in front of the vehicle. Headlights are presumed to comply with this requirement, if they are equipped with lenses, reflectors or control devices which have been tested and approved by the Division of Motor Vehicles.

"Auxiliary lights must also be submitted by the manufacturers or sales agents for test by and approval of the Division of Motor Vehicles.

"There are other special provisions for lights upon loads which extend more than four feet beyond the bed or body of the vehicle carrying them and also for vehicles having a body or load in excess of eighty inches in width, with which truck drivers and owners should become familiar. These lights are known as clearance or load lights and it is extremely important, as a protection to other users of the highway, that such clearance or road lights be displayed.

"Every motor vehicle must have two lighted headlights from half an hour before sunset to half an hour after sunrise on the public highway or during heavy fog or thick smoke so that objects 200 feet ahead may be clearly discernible. The law defines six types of lights: headlights, sidelights, tail lights, spot lights auxiliary lights and clearance lights. Headlights must be not more than 54 inches above the ground and two sidelights must have not more than four candlepower globes. Spotlights are limited to two in number, the centers not less than 30 or more than 72 inches above the level surface on which the vehicle stands. They must be so adujsted that when measured 100 feet ahead the main parallel beam shall not rise more than 30 inches above the ground. Thirty-two standard candle power bulbs may be used.

"Tail lights must show red and be plainly visible at least 500 feet to the rear of the vehicle and illuminate the number plate to be visible under normal conditions not less than 50 feet back.'

New Motor Laws Are Explained

By George E. Sanford
Attorney California State Automobile Association.

Editor's Note: This is the ninth and concluding article of a series written by George E. Sanford.

In addition to the major changes in the motor vehicle code, there are a number of lesser interest, designed to clarify the law in most instances. One change not referred to in this series is that amending Sections 147 and 148. Under this change, persons found injuring or tampering with motor vehicles may be taken into custody immediately upon discovery by police officers instead of receiving a five days' notice to appear.

A new section, No. 45½, makes it a misdemeanor for any person to refuse or neglect to deliver a certificate of ownership, the pink slip, to a transferee who is entitled thereto under the law. In many instances purchasers of automobiles on the installment plan, having paid up the purchase contract in full, have been unable to secure a pink certificate of ownership from the pervious legal owner. Often the latter holds the certificate to force the purchaser to pay additional amounts claimed to have accrued as the result of insurance or other forms of indebtedness foreign and apart from the purchase contract.

The definitions of "business" and "residential" sections, under the act, have been revised to clear up certain ambiguities. The requirements on signposting all highways leaving the signing of secondary roads optional.

The requirement that railroad crossing warning signs be posted not less than 300 feet from the crossing has been changed to permit their erection at the position where they will best serve their purpose.

Section requiring that herders accompany stock on the highway to permit passage of vehicles has been revised to make it more reasonable.

You Can Now Talk With Mexico

TELEPHONE SERVICE EXTENDED TO MEXICO

As a result of arrangements made by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, telephone communication between the United States and several of the principal cities of Mexico was opened Friday morning, September 30, it is announced by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

It is now possible to talk from any Bell System point to Mexico City, Pueblo, Tampico, San Luis Potosi, Victoria, Saltillo, Monterrey and Nuevo Laredo. The total length of the circuit between Washington, D. C., and Mexico City is 3,357 miles. This new service brings Mexico's capital city, her principal seaport, Tampico and the capitals of some of her richest and most progressive states within the range of American telephone communication.

The Bell System has made arrangements to connect at Laredo, Texas, with the newly-completed lines of the Mexican Telephone and Telegraph Corporation. At this point the line will cross the Rio Grande which there forms the international boundary. From Nuevo Laredo, on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, the long distance line runs through some arid regions and farming country, southward to Mexico City and Pueblo. It passes through Monterrey, Saltillo, San Luis Potosi and Queretaro, affording telephone communication to these points. A branch line extends from San Lupis Potosi to Tampico the important oil port on the semi-tropical East coast of Mexico. Another line runs up from Tampico to Victoria.

The Mexican long distance lines have practically all been built within the last year or two and are of thoroughly modern construction. Telephone repeaters have been installed at intervals to strengthen the voice-carrying currents as they become weak from covering long distances, and the lines have been designed with a view to providing such additional circuits as the growth of the traffic may require. The Bel System already connects with the telephone systems of Canada, Cuba and (by radio telephone Great Britain. The new service add Mexico to the list of countries which are within speaking distance of American telephone users.

BOARD SANCTIONS BAY BRIDGE SIGNS

The erection of two signs directing people to the Dumbarton bridge was sanctioned Monday evening by the board of trustees The signs are to be erected and maintained by the Dumbarton Bridge Co. One is to be an electric sign and will be hung under the Redwood City sign at the corner of Broadway and the highway. The other is to be an enamel sign at the corner of Main street and Phelps street. The proposition of having signs at these points was initiated by the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce in order to assist tourists in finding the most direct route to the bridge as well as giving the local merchants the advantage of having this travel pass their shops. The erection of the signs will be mde under the direction of I. C. Drathman, city building inspector.

MILK RATING IS GIVEN FOR COUNTY DAIRYMEN

Dairies of County SEcore High in Grades

At a surprise milk scoring contest conducted September 27 to 30th by a representative of the State Department of Agriculture, this county's milk supply maintained the high score of 93.4% figured on a volume basis. This score is slightly less than that received at the previous contest due to a lowering of the butter fat in some of the milk on account of feeding conditions on some of the dairies.

The scoring contests are held at quarterly periods and the milk is judged for bacteria, flavor and odor, sediment, butter fat, solids, acidity, bottle and cap. This is the State Dairy Bureau's method of checking the effectiveness of the local inspection department and maintaining uniform good grade of milk throughout the state. The judges officiating in the scoring were H. E. Ball State Market Milk Specialist, and J. J. Garland, county milk inspector.

The results are as follows:

Date Set For Alumni Home-Coming

Students of Sequoia High School Plan Wonderful Evenings Program Nov. 5

November fifth will be a big day for the alumni of Sequoia, as preparations are under way for an alumni home-coming. Four hundred invitations are to be sent out to graduates and a wonderful evening's program is being prepared. The graduates will attend the free production of four one-act operettas by Mr. Carrington, and the alumni association is to furnish dance music and light refreshments, in the library at the conclusion of the program in the auditorium.

Forestal O'Connell, vice-president of the Alumni Association says: "While in school every present member of the alumni association of Sequoia was proud that his school was repeatedly rated among the 'higest in the state.' It still is—we should still be proud of it. With all of these graduates who pushed Sequoia up and up, combined—what an organization! The "home-coming" is a starter for an active program.

Miss Marie Haurat, secretary-treasurer of the alumni association says: "Our plan is to get enough alumni really interested so that they will help re-organize "The Maskers," an alumni dramatic club. "Once in a Blue Moon," presented in 1925, was the last play given by that organization. We are hoping to give a play this year, the proceeds from which will be put in the alumni treasury. If a large enough sum of money is taken in, a scholarship trust fund will be founded.

The graduates' association gave their only social affair of last year when they gave a banquet in honor of the seniors last June.

Sequoia High Plays San Mateo Today

This afternoon at 3:30 Sequoia will play her first Peninsula Athletic League game against "Spud" Spaulding's San Mateo eleven, 1926 state champs, at the San Mateo field.

Coach Raymon Dimick in his first year as Sequoia's football coach, has built up a formidable team from a "green" bunch of fellows. He has guided them through a fairly successful practice season. His team held Cogswell 6-0 in their first game of the season. In the second game, they vanquished Monterey 6-0. The score of their game with Watsonville was 6-6, and their last practice game ended in a victory for the Hollister cowboys by the score of 14-6.

Sequoia will enter the coming season with a good chance of "copping" the title.

Coach Dimick has shifted his line-up a little. He has taken Frank Archibald from center and placed him at an end position Dick Chilcott has been placed at center. This change worked well in the Hollister game and should prove valuable in the game Friday. Frank Ferran has been promoted from the second string to a guard position with Sutton and Britschgi.

Coach Dimick has not announced the starting line-up but will use the following men in the game:

Ends: Danz, Archibald, Miche and Hamilton.

Tackles: Lintner, Clancy, Harper, Kanno.

Guards: Ferran, Sutton, Britschgi, Enten.

Center: Chilcott.

Halfback: Honeyman, Coehlo Hansen.

Fullbacks: Lintner, Schweikert.

Quarterback: Jansing.

Sequoia Basketeers Split Two Games

Battling San Mateo's two teams, Sesuoia's 110's and 120's opened the Peninsula Athletic League Basketball season in the Sesuoia Gym, last Friday night, September 30th.

The 10's lost their first league game by a score of 13 to 8. This does not mean that the boys have not a chance to show their ability in playing basketball aginst San Mateo, for both tems play each other again in the latter part of the season.

The 120's won their battle against the San Mateo 120 lb aggregation by a score of 10 to 6. Sequoia took the lead in the first quarter, and held it throughout the game.

Tonight the 110's and 120's will play their second game of the league season. The game will be played in the new South City gymn.

Notes of Interest From Sequoia Hi

At the commissioners meeting, Tuesday, Merlon Stokes, '31, was appointed assistant yell leader.

Pep pamphlets, containing Sequoia songs and yells, are on sale this week in the publication room.

Monday afternoon in the first girls' interclub hockey competition, Club I defeated Club IV by a score of 4 to 0.

A jolly-up dance for boys and girls was held by S. G. S. in the upper halls and clubrooms Wednesday afternoon from 4 to 6.

The seniors are the sole wearers of the beret, a kind of rooters cap, while the remainder of the students are compelled to wear fifty-fifty caps.

The annual bonfire heretofore staged before the San Mateo-Sequoia football game will be held on the eve of the Palo Alto-Sequoia game instead.

"The Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil," a fantasy, will be staged by Miss Melton's five freshman English classes in Assembly October 13.

Yesterday afternoon, a pep rally was held, for the San Mateo football game. Sam Enten and Roussell Smith, with blackened faces and in football suits, gave a short skit resembling that of the well-known "Two Black Crows."

Tomorrow evening, the Sophomores will hold a party in the library. Miss Proctor, Br. Brown, advisors, and Jack Morgan are planning the affair, which will be given in the form of a masquerade lance.

The Sequoia Times is sponsoring an auction sale, November 21 of all the found articles left in the library. There are many useful articles in the collection and students are also requested to bring anything which they have no further use for, that is so called "white elephant donations."

The regular Tuesday half-hour lectures to be given by teachers will be on the following topics:

Freshmen—Manners and Conduct in School.

Sophomores—Opportunity for Leadership in Sequoia.

Juniors—Self Reliance.

Seniors—Scholarship and Scholarship Society.

ASK CHANGE OF RATES FOR DUMBARTON BRIDGE

A request was received by the board of supervisors Monday from the Dumbarton Bridge Company asking that the ordinance fixing the rates of toll on that structure be ammended. The present rates are 20c for passenger automobiles of two passengers or less, 30c for 2 to 5 passengers, and 35c for 5 to 7 passengers. This diversity of rates results in confusion and loss of time, it is stated, and the bridge company requests that a flat rate of 30c for each automobile of not more than seven passenger capacity be charged.

The matter was laid over for two weeks at the suggestion of Supervisor Hickey in order that the rates and conditions might be studied.

We "launder" the Gas before you get it

It comes to you clean

The gas used in your home for cooking, water heating and house heating is delivered to you clean.

Right after gas is made it passes through large "scrubbing" tanks. Then it goes through purifiers. Only pure gas that burns clean passes into the pipes that lead to your home.

That is why gas is a clean fuel.

And gas is all fuel. When you want heat, it is instantly ready—to burn gently for a second or two or to burn vigorously for hours.

Because gas is so clean and convenient, a gas range, gas water heater or a gas-fired furnace saves your time and effort.

The Gorgas Idea

GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

WHAT CAN BE DONE FOR THE HARD-OF-HEARING

By Alice G. Bryant, M. D.
Boston, Mass.
Member Gorgas Memorial

The problem of the deafened is not new, but our methods of approach, interpretations and procedures are new. The problem is vital, for preliminary surveys of the children in our public schools by the American Federation of Organizations for the Hard-of-Hearing find 3,000,000 children with defective hearing.

In 1902, Martha Bhuhn founded the first school in lip-reading for the deafened adult. Other schools have been established and they have all exercised a profound influence and enriched the lives of the deafened.

Dr. Franklin Bock of Rochester N. Y., believed that many of the retarded children in the public schools were hard of hearing due to ear troubles. In 1909 he was permitted to hold a clinic in a public school and in 1916 he was able to introduce lip-reading in the public schools of his city, and later his appeal to hold speech correction classes was granted. Today many lip-reading teachers are actively functioning. A few of the public schools have introduced lip-reading.

Last year a department of lip-reading was established by the board of directors of the National Education Association. The Volta bureau has rendered able assistance.

An acoustic engineer, Dr. Horace Fletcher, has invented the phone-audimeter which correctly and accurately detects and grades deafness. It is efficiently productive, for it permits group testing, thus shortening the testing period. The percentage of deafness and the "danger zone" aid ear specialists and lip-reading teachers. When the deafened schoolchildren repeat once, twice or more times, it is a waste of education. The pupils are penalized, but we are the offenders. We owe the pupils a new valuation in education. They become repeating machines where efforts are stultified, spirits are depressed and pride it as a discount.

Do not stress overhead costs. Increase production by eliminating waste, waste of effort, time, strength and usefulness. Expert lip-reading teachers will materially help to solve the problem. They have discovered the facts by laborious work. They have knowledge by conviction, as each child must be judiciously studied and individually taught.

The hard-of-hearing pupil should not be segregated or isolated. He needs a knowledge of school conditions. He should associate with his teachers and school comrades. He no longer is forgotten or falls behind in his classes or enters the great vast world unheralded, unwelcomed and unprepared to meet its problems. No longer are his wistful hopes shattered. He has a romantic history of progress. In spite of his handicap, with strengthened confidence and unshaken faith, backed by a full record of progress and output, he is qualified for his life's work and he meets it. The captains of health and education have been his life preservers.

EXPERT PRENATAL CARE IMPORTANT

By C. Jeff Miller, New Orleans, La
Member Gorgas Memorial

From an economic standpoint, if for no other reason, modern civilization no longer tolerates the loss of life for which such preventable diseases as tuberculosis, typhoid, diptheria and other acute infectious diseases are responsible. On the other hand, it is a curious commentary on our sense of proportion that annually, here in the United States, we permit some twenty thousand women to die in childbirth, at least 50 per cent of them from preventable causes, and that some 25 per cent of our future citizens perish before they ever enter upon life.

Statistics are notoriously unreliable, but it is beyond question that in no country of the civilized world is it quite so unsafe to bear children as in the United States. The maternal deaths for the same period were relatively greater that the casualties of the World war. The death rate per 100,000 among childbearing women has increased from 13.3 in 1900 to 16.9 in 1921, and the death toll is taken at an average age of less than 30 years.

From the standpoint of the child the situation is even worse, for the total death rate is thirteen times as high as the maternal. It has been estimated that 100,000 stillbirths occur annually in the United States, and that equally as many babies perish within a month after they are born.

The club to these appalling figures lies in the fact that the majority of American women are not receiving adaquate prenatal care. In Baltimore, for instance, where the opportunities for medical attention are unsurpassed, a recent report of the Department of Labor shows that more than 47 per cent of pregnant women receive no prenatal care at all. A recent analysis of the deaths in Massachusetts for a single year shows that 35 per cent of the women who died after labor had no prenatal care at all, and that sixty per cent of the obstertric deaths were from causes which experience has shown can be practically eliminated by the proper sort of prenatal supervision. At the New York Lying-In Hospital the death rate for emergency cases is ten times what it is for cases supervised in their own clinics through out pregnancy.

The responsibility for these figures, must, to a large extent, be borne by the women themselves. In spite of campaigns of education and in spite of unparalleled opportunities for medical treatment, many of them persist in ignoring their condition until some complication develops for which even expert treatment is of no avail. Supervision cannot be given to women who will not apply for it,, or who believe that obstetrics is the sort of thing that anybody can handle, forgetting that in no other branch of medicine are more special qualifications necessary.

For the sake of themselves and of their unborn children, women should not view this, their greatest function, as a light thing. They should expect and demand for it the most expert treatment that can be secured. Childbearing in itself is not an inherently dangerous thing, but neglected childbearing is, and until that realization comes to all women, the death rate for mother and babies is not destined to improve.

ROBINSON CRUSOE had no telephone. There was no one on his island to talk to but Friday who was never beyond the reach of Crusoe's voice.

But there is no reason for any one in the United States to live like Robinson Crusoe. Anyone's telephone reaches anywhere and everywhere in the land. It will put people in touch with the nearest village or most distant city. It will run errands through rain and snow just as cheerfully as on sunshiny days. It helps people keep in touch with their neighborhoods and it makes one neighborhood of the whole country.

Moreover, it is the constant aim of the Bell System which serves the country to make its service better and to fit it more closely to the particular needs and desires of its telephone users.

Will Casey will participate in the Associated Cyclers' ten mile road race at San Leandro tomorrow. His friends are not sanguine of his success. He has just begun to raise a mustache and will be greatly handicapped by the salt breezes humming through his whiskers.

Stuart Chesney, deputy postmaster of Angels Camps, called on friends here last Saturday.

F. Levy of the firm of Levy Brothers of Halfmoon Bay was among the coast visitors here Monday.

Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1 announces a masquerade ball in the new pavilion for Thanksgiving eve. The proceeds will go towards paying for the new pavillion.

L. J. Frank, manager of the Frank Tanning Co. has returned from a two months' trip to Oregon.

The prisoners at the county jail have constructed a macadamized walk from Main street to the jail. This is a much needed improvement, as in the winter season the approach to the bastile from the Wahl building is very disagreeable.

Mineola Council Wednesday evening gave George W. Lovie a reception at Redmen's hall in the Wahl building. It was an enjoyable affair of song and speech making, followed by refreshments. Mr. Lovie has done much for the council and the reception was tendered in recognition of his services.

Last Sunday evening at the invitation of Rev. Mr. Marr, a large number of members of Bay View Lodge No. 108 I. O. O. F. attended services at the Congregational church. This is the way, and a fitting way too, that the thirty-fifth anniversary of the local lodge was observed. It is among the oldest and most substantial lodges of the county, if not in the state. On the evening of October 4, 1862, in the upper story of the old courthouse, Bay View Lodge first saw the light of existence. Its charter members were Charles N. Fox (first Noble Grand), S. H. Schneider, Joseph Keith, T. W. Lathrop, J. W. Turner, and A. Teague, five of whom have since been mustered out. Since its organization 408 members have been initiated, $30,617 has been paid in sick benefits, $5,630.00 for funeral purposes, $5,481.70 for charitable objects, and $10,180 in general expenses. The lodge owns its own building and has a well fortified sick benefit fund and several thousand dollars out at interest. The present membership (in good standing) is 145. The present noble grand is Frank Granger.

Frank Yount of Belmont returned home Wednesday from a week's outing in the vicinity of Mount Hamilton. He was accompanied by six of his friends of San Jose. They all went prepared for a successful deer hunt, and judging from the way Mr. Yount speaks that end was accomplished. The capture of twelve large deer and a Californi lion was the result of the trip.

Rev. William Brewer of San Mateo was here Monday. He is greatly interested in the matter of seting aside the Big Basin redwood forest for a state park. He has written much about the subject and his visit here Monday was to talk it up. Mr. Brewer believes that the park would be a great benefit to this county, and believes that it can be secured if the people will take hold of the project in the proper spirit.

CHINESE PIRATE ATTACKS SEEN IN DIX FILM "SHANGHAI BOUND"

Richard Dix in the Pirate attacks rivalling the storied days of old are not uncommon in China, according to Edward S. (Tex) O'Reilly. They have been in progress for centuries, and the only difference between present day onslaughts and those of former times is an improvement in methods.

Thousands of sampans and junks float about on the Yangtse river at Shanghai and for hundreds of miles inland. Most of them are homes or cargo carriers. Many are handled by organized bands of marauders. They often board ocean going liners, murder the crews and strip the passengers.

During the Boxer rebilion they burst loose without fear of punishment. When Dr. Sun Yat Sen started the Republican movement several years ago they joined the revolutionary armies. At the present, different groups of bandits are members of different armies.

Some of the intense drama of floating down this enormous river by night, of the dangers undergone by escaping refugees, of the colorful life in the foreign quarter of Shanghai will be seen in Richard Dix' new Paramount picture, "Shanghai Bound," on its arrival at the Sequoia Theatre next Monday and Tuesdy.

Mr. O'Reilly, author of the story, was for two years drill master of the Chinese Imeprial Army. For a time he was a member of the International Police Force at Shanghai. Knowing China intimately, he co-operated with John Goodrich and Ray Harris in the development of his story for the screen. Luther Reed directed. Mary Brian is cast as Dix' leading woman.

Isolation Ward Planned for County Hospital

The need of an isolation ward at the Community Hospital, where patients suffering with smallpox and other contagious diseases may be cared for was brought to the attention of the board of supervisors Monday in a letter from Dr. F. H. Smith, county health officer. Dr. Smith stated that the hospital offered no facilities for the care of isolation cases except those suffering with tuberculosis.

The lack of suitable facilities was stated by Supervisor Hickey to be "criminal." The suggestion of Dr. Smith also evoked favorable comment from the other supervisors and from Chairman Poole. The board decided to meet at the hospital the following day when they would look over the situation and plan some way of remedying the need.

Leagues Worth $50,000,000

The American and National leagues each have increased in value over $1,000,000 a year since 1915, says Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees. Ruppert placed the present value of the sixteen teams in baseball's premier circuits at $50,000,000.

When the Yankees' colonels, Rupert and T. L. Huston, bought the club in 1915, they paid $260,000. It is doubtful whether $3,000,000 would purchase the Yankees today, for Ruppert declared that Babe Ruth alone, when he has completed his present three-year contract with the team, will represent an investment of $600,000, including salary and purchase price.

Col. Jacob Ruppert.

Rupert set the valuation of each major league at $25,000,000 at present quotations, whereas, he said both leagues did not exceed that sum in value twelve years ago.

This amazing growth, Ruppert said, was due to the influence of other sports and to the added leisure of present-day Americans. "The American idea used to be to work early and late. A business man then started at eight and quit at six. Now he starts at nine and quits early in the afternoon."

"Golf is supposed to have taken patronage from the ball parks, but I believe golf has increased interest in baseball because of a common bond—you might call it the sporting, the athletic complex," he said.

Yankees Beaten by Red Sox 19 Times

No club in either league has won every game from another team in a season's play. It happened several times in the National league previous to 1900. The Boston Red Sox came the closest to taking the whole season's schedule from another club when they defeated the New York Yankees 19 out of 21 games in 1912.

Jack Sharkey's Manager Has Had a Long Career

Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, has been associated intimately with the boxing game nearly all his life, which has been about 38 years. His closest connection was through Johnny Lynch, former bantam star, who is a brother-in-law. Old-timers will also remember some of the other names of Buckley's first associates, such as Matty Baldwin, Dave Deschler and Jimmy Walsh. At present Buckley has about 20 boxers in his stable.

Sharkey is Buckley's heavyweight and the Boston manager is confident that he has in him a heavyweight champion. And what Buckley stresses most is that Buckley will be Sharkey's manager when Sharkey is champion.

Cook's Knee Mends and He Predicts Good Year

Paul Cook, Muskegon athletic star, and a member of the University of Michigan varsity squad last year, says that his injured knee is entirely well again. Cook expects to win a regular berth at Michigan.

The leg injured kept Cook out of the game most of last year. He entered the Illinois game for a few minutes. He once attended Illinois, so Coach Yost allowed him to enter the game against his old college.

Cook went through his high school athletic career without an injury. The knee was injured while he was sliding into a base in a class baseball game a year ago.

Get Chance at Title

Dave Shade, the uncrowned king of the middleweights, is being seriously considered as one of the three fighters in a three-cornered affair to be staged in Madison Square Garden this winter. Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, and Tiger Flowers are the other two. Flowers has been after another match with Walker ever since he dropped the title. According to present plans, Shade and Flower would meet first and the winner would be sent against Walker.

Grid Rule Changes to Young Gridders

Many of the coaches have gone on record as saying that the new rules will make no great difference in the game of football.

As a general proposition this may be true. Most elevens were slow in realizing the possibilities of the forward pass. It will probably turn out that some coach will take full advantage of the changes in the rules and that his team will do considerable damage with the lateral and the backward pass.

BRITISH REVIVE ROOSTER FIGHTS

Miners of Mountain Regions Hold Frequent Mains.

Cock-fighting, an ancient blood sport, heavily suppressed by the police, is showing a marked revival in the mountain districts in Britain. Two members of the British aristocracy were recently fined $50 for participating in the promotion of a cock-fight.

This form of sport flourished in Britain from the time of the Roman invasion, and the authorities have been trying to suppress it since 1365. Their efforts were partly successful in 1849, when cock-pits in the cities were closed down, but their efforts have been practically fruitless in the mountainous regions of Britain.

The owners of fighting cocks are usually miners who train these birds, which weigh from three to four pounds, and match them for a heavy stake.

A series of matches are carried out at a meeting, where the birds fight equipped with a pair of silver or steel spurs, with which they slash and tear each other, until one drops and is unable to rise from loss of blood. In some mains, as the matches are called, the cocks fight until only one is left alive.

These matches usually take place on a Sunday morning, the promoters taking the utmost precaution to guard their plans from the police, who are always on the lookout for these meetings.

An unfrequented spot in the moors or mountains is chosen for the contests and a cordon of scouts are placed for miles around to give warning of the approach of the authorities.

Four One-Armed Stars Prove Big Sports Value

Four athletes of the Middle West are proving to the sport world that one arm is as good as two. The one-armed athletic fraternity boasts two star pitchers in Missouri, the handball champion of Minnesota and a crack Chicago golfer.

The baseball stars are Henry J. Feldcamp, pitcher for the University of Missouri, and Orville Paul of St. Louis Central High. Feldcamp won two games and lost two for the Tigers this season, and in a single game against Iowa State struck out eleven men, fielded five chances perfectly and got two hits. He is nineteen and a southpaw. Paul in a single game had five assists and slashed out a double. He fields barehanded.

The handball star, George Quam of Minneapolis, has held the city title several times and is now state Y. M. C. A. champion. And the golfer is W. O. Colvin, who started the season with an eagle 2 on a 405-yard hole of the French Lick (Ind.) course.

George Wilson Rejects Pro Football Overtures

George Wilson, former college and professional football star, is out of the game unless Eastern promoters raise their bids for his services.

"Football is no longer a sentiment with me," he said in announcing that he had turned down three proposed contracts from American league clubs.

As a University of Washington player, Wilson was almost unanimously chosen All-American back after the season of 1925. Last year he led his own professional team.

The rejected contracts were submitted by Chicago, New York and Philadelphia organizations.

Indians Get Star

One year ago Mel Harder was pitching for his high school baseball team in Omaha. Now, at the age of seventeen, he has been purchased from the Omaha Western league club by the Cleveland American league team for $18,000 in cash and two ball players to be named later.

Pair Started Right

Ty Cobb at twenty-four was leading his league in hitting. Waner at the same age is doing the same thing. Collins at twenty-two was just beginning to show his greatness. Lazzeri, also twenty-two, is doing the same. Whether Tony and Paul have the stamina and the competitive spirit that kept Cobb and Collins traveling at record-breaking speed for 22 and 21 years, respectively, is something only time will tell. They at least are started in the right direction.

"A home . . . a home!" repeated the other, moody eyes on the pipe which he rubbed in his broad palm. "It doesn't mean anything to me, John."

"Yes, I know," and Skene looked pityingly at his chief. Then voices on deck straightened them in their chairs. A sailor thrust his head through the door of the cabin.

"There's an Injun, here with some news."

"Send him down!"

The Cree interpreter entered the cabin, followed by a hunter whose face was alive with excitement, as he chattered to the Cree.

"What's on his mind, Michel?" demanded McDonald.

Shutting off with upraised hand the stream of Cree from the mouth of the Indian, the interpreter replied: "Joe Mokoman ees dead!"

"What?" McDonald rasped. "Dead? How d'you mean? Killed?"

"Found dead on de Canoe Riviere, wid hees t'roat ripped out."

"Well, I'll be d—d! Who found him? This bird?"

"No, he see some Cree crossin' ice at de Beeg point—dey tell him."

With a quick movement, McDonald reached and drew the interpreter to him. "You say some of the Indians are crossing to the mainland?"

For a space the harsh phonetics of the Cree tongue filled the cabin.

"At Beeg point, yesterday, he see many dog-team from de nord' cross de ice. A Canoe Riviere hunter say he fin' Mokoman dead in snow by riviere shore."

"But where's old Souci? Didn't he make his medicine on the Canoe?"

"Yes, he say Souci mak' beeg medicine two sleep back—'all de hunter een nord of Islan' come."

"Good! Souci is bringing them down the coast."

But as the interpreter continued to interrogate the Indian his eyes widened in surprise, which swiftly gave way to consternation. Turning excitedly, he cried: "Souci tell dem Cree dat de devil ees een de ship here! He scare dem crazee—tak' dem all ovair de ice to Elkwan!"

McDonald and Skene were on their feet. "What?" roared the free-trader. "He's taken them — to Elkwan? Stunned, the white men sought each other's faces.

"Souci, he come here to fool us," went on Michel. "He work all tam' for de Hudson's Bay."

"Whipsawed!" And McDonald's bulk slid limply into his chair.

"The old beggar! He fed it to us like a lot of schoolboys!" sputtered Skene, wagging his grizzled head. "He sure put it over in style."

"Played like a pair of fish!" McDonald suddenly straightened. "Skene, for two cents I'd cross the ice and get that fur. It's ours—they stole it."

Skene looked hard into the blue eyes of his chief. "First, we'd have a handsome row to get it, that man with the scar, and his half-breed will fight; second, the police would be up here before we were out of the ice. Foolish talk!"

McDonald's twisted features relaxed. "You're right, John, right. It can't be done. We've got too much at stake."

Skene looked suggestively at his chief, as he added: "We have—and you have."

The other shifted his gaze as he muttered, "Yes—that's only too true."

"But Mokoman! What'd you say happened to him?" Skene asked Michel.

"He was killed by de dog—hees t'roat tore."

"Killed by his own dogs—queer! Might have been wolves."

"No, de dog follow shoe tracks back to de trail. No wolf do dat."

"Well, so much for Mokoman! Small loss—never liked him."

"Does he know how much fur they had—these hunters who crossed?" asked the mate.

"Dey have mooch fur—'bout one hunder skin."

"Half of it silver and black, probably. A small fortune! H—l!" In his chagrin Skene crashed his hard fist on the table.

"You're a judge of men, John. That fellow sure licked us," McDonald admitted ruefuly. "Now we've got no time to lose with the southern hunters. —Michel!"

The Cree leaned to hear the whispered order of the free-trader. "You keep this Indian on the boat—fill him up and lock him in, forward. If he got loose among the southern camps with this devil talk, they'd follow the others. Breault ought to know, but the Lord knows where he is."

Shortly two dog-teams left the ship bound for the camps in the south half of the island in a mad rush to save the skins yet untraded.

* * * * * * * *

The Christmas mail from Albany was approaching on the river trail below Elkwan. From the upper Elkwan and the Shamattawa, from the Winisk and the Raft, for days the hunters had drifted in to the post, dog harness gay with colored worsted and jingling with bells. There old Souci, elated by his stratagem and proud of the praise which Garth had given unstintedly in the privacy of his tent, had led the Akimiski hunters with their valuable fur-packs. In the trade-room Garth and Etienne were busy preparing for the trade which had not yet begun, for an Indian makes a ceremony of his Christmas visit to a post and in contrast to the speed with which he pushes his dogs over the river trails on the way in, is the deliberation with which he proceeds to barter his hunt when he has reached the fur post.

It was a happy pair that were opening bundles of blankets, getting out sugar and flour, tea and tobacco, from the store-room—filling the shelves with the trade-goods of the company.

"Ah-hah! W'at goin' on out dere?" Etienne looked from a window. "De mail ees comin'!" he cried, and slipping on his parka, went out followed by Garth.

The Albany mail! Garth Guthrie's thoughts were a medley of surmises, questions, hopes. Letters from home! There would be little from his family—Ethel, that would bring cheer to an exile's Christmas. But the letter which a girl on the moonlit shore of the Albany had promised to send him—had she remembered? As he passed the tipis on his way to the chattering people on the shore, his heart was quick with expectation—hope. After the disapproval—reproach, of home letters, the letter from Joan Quarrier would come like the sun breaking through the cloud canopy of the bay. But if she had forgotten? As he joined Etienne and Marie, the possibility of there being no letter on the sled behind the four Ungava huskies galloping in to Elkwan to the shouts of the Crees, made him set his finger nails in the palm of his hands.

Up at his quarters, the little Christmas spruce waited on a table—for her letter—his Christmas. Should it wait in vain?

In the trade-room Garth opened the mail bag with nervous fingers. Clara's familiar hand, company mail from Cameron, two from Ethel, pale blue—He heard the hammering of his heart as he fumbled for, and drew out, the last envelops in the bag. One from an old army friend, another from his colonel, a third! Slowly he slid the folded paper from the one beneath—the last, as he doubtfully shook his head, numb with disappointment.

He looked! A strange hand—a woman's Hers! She had kept her word to the exile.

In his joy Garth sought the privacy of the rear of the counter to read Joan Quarrier's letter. Then he remembered. He had said it was to hang from the tree, to be read last, on Christmas day. Tucking it into the shirt beneath his coat, he put the others in a pocket and joined Etienne and the hungry dog-runner, who waited for Marie's dinner.

After all, it was to be a happy Christmas. A trade beyond his hopes; triumph over the schooner which lay thirty miles away over the ice—and word from the girl who faced so dauntlessly with those unwavering dark eyes. A Merry Christmas for Garth Guthrie, come what might from Charlie and Clara—and Ethel. From Ethel, what?

On Christmas eve he stood in his living room with old Anne, before the little spruce, brave with worsted and colored paper and bits of lighted candle. On the tree hung colored bags and at its foot were small parcels tied with gaudy Christmas ribbon. On the topmost twig was a letter.

"You told them, Anne?" he asked the grinning squaw, proud in her best wool dress, her raven hair coquettishly circled by a huge pink ribbon—a gift of Garth's, cherished for ceremonies like the present.

"Ah-hah," chuckled the faithful Cree. "Dey come soon, now. Marie, she rub dem chil's face till dey shine lak de moon."

Garth and Shot simultaneously sprang to the door to welcome the comely Marie, leading her excited brood of six, with the grinning Etienne as rear guard.

"Merry Christmas, Marie! Jean! Yvonne!" he cried, fairly dragging the giggling and embarrassed children into the house. "Ah, Monsieur Etienne Savanne, friend of McDonald Ha! Ha!, is also with us tonight."

With his audience seated, Garth proceeded to divide the gifts he had ordered the previous year from lower Canada. For each of the children was a bag of candy, which was opened with wide-eyed curiosity and grins of delight. And, as the sweet tooth of grown-ups is also highly developed in the North, Marie and Anne, who had not been forgotten, swiftly evidenced their appreciation of good candy by joining the children in their munching.

Then the toys in packages marked with the children's names were given out. There remained a dress each for Marie and Anne, and a Ross sporting rifle for the delighted Etienne.

In the heart of the Santa Claus of Elkwan, the pleasure lighting the dark faces of his friends at his unexpected gifts reacted manyfold. Besides, at the top of the tree, his own Christmas waited his eager eyes.

When with much bustle and chatter his friends returned to their cabin and old Anne left him, Garth sat down to read the letters from home. The first opened was his brother's, which ran as follows:

"If I had been told that my own brother was to disgrace himself as you have seen fit to do up there on James bay, I should have knocked down the liar who said it. We understand now your strange refusal to return home, your indifference to Ethel and the business. Professor Quarrier has given me the whole shameful story. A white woman would have been bad enough—but a squaw! Pah!"

Guthrie's lean face set hard as he read the first lines.

"A white woman would have been bad enough—but a squaw!" Reading no further, he crushed the letter in his hand and let it fall.

"Poor Ninda!"

The letter from Clara was a medley of hysteria, reproach, and unmistakable evidence of a sincere affection for her erring brother-in-law. His eyes softened as he followed the misguided woman's effort to appeal to his sentiment—to his old love for Ethel.

"Of course she knows, Garth. That Quarrier man spread it all over town. But I am sure, in spite of it all, she still loves you—would forgive, if you asked her. Oh, Garth! You're the only brother I have, and I've always doted on you. Won't you, for my sake, come back this spring—for your own, for Ethel's sake. I don't know what she's writing you, but you mustn't take it seriously. She's terribly hurt, of course—but I know she'll forget it all, if you come back."

"Poor old Clara," said the man aloud. "Poor, simple Clara! She can't see yet that it's brother Charlie who counts with Ethel, not I."

So Quarrier had had his revenge, Quarrier, her brother. It was not strange after the snubbing he got. But she? What did Joan Quarrier think of the tale her brother had brought to Charles Guthrie?

Then he opened the two letters in the blue envelopes. One was dated a month earlier than the other and he read that first.

"I imagine your life in France," ran the letter, "was similar to that of the last year on James bay. I have learned much of what went on over there. Was it a French girl or an army nurse?"

She had unwittingly hurt him in the only way it was now possible for Ethel Falconer to reach the man who had once loved her. Army nurse! What had Ethel done for Canada to qualify her as a critic of the women who had toiled and dared behind the lines, that stricken men might live?

He read on: "Of course, Garth, this is your answer. I was willing to forget the slight, the neglect, but when we learned how you had been living, my love died. To share your affections with an ignorant, immoral squaw was asking a little too much, Garth."

The man who read laughed outright. "Your love died, my poor child, on the wharf at Quebec, when you saw what the Huns had done to your soldier boy," he said aloud.

"Well, why the postscript?" he went on. "She throws me over in the first letter, horse, foot and dragoons; why continue the agony?"

Opening the second envelop, he read: "When I wrote you, Garth, dear, I did not understand that she had died, but Mr. Quarrier tells me that his sister helped nurse her. Of course, it was all a horrible shock, but now that it is over and you may come home, I am willing to forget the past—if you want me to."

Rising in disgust, Guthrie paced the floor. "Merciful heavens! She's willing to forget the past! Poor, shallow, scheming Ethel! Rather than lose brother-in-law Charles, you cray-fish, eat humble-pie, grovel on your knees. 'Was it a French girl or a nurse?'" he quoted scathingly. "Ready to swallow that, too, are you, my dear?"

Guthrie finished the letter. So Ethel Falconer waited with open arms for the prodigal lover. But, unlike the son of the tale, the prodigal lover was not returning.

Picking up and finishing the crumpled letter of Charles, Garth learned that, inasmuch as he had disgraced the family name and ignored the family wishes, the Guthrie family would proceed to try to forget its black sheep.

With a smile of contempt Garth opened the door of the sheet-iron stove and tossed in the letters. Clare's he would answer—good-hearted, well-meaning, old Clara, who alone had sensed his condition and his unhappiness, on his return home. Then raising his arms and expelling a deep breath of relief, he said: "Thank God, that's over! And now—"

He took the letter of Joan Quarrier from the tree and eagerly opened it.

"Dear Mr. Exile:

"Have you kept your promise? Is this the last letter to be read? I wish you a very happy Christmas, but just how that would be possible up there on your frozen west coast is difficult to imagine. However, I hope you will not be lonely with thoughts of home and what you have so stubbornly turned from."

Garth's brows knotted in thought. "Of course," he surmised, "she must know about Ethel since her brother had met Charles—had heard of the engagement and his strange actions. But if she thought him still engaged, why did she write?"

Joan continued:

"My winter has been an active one, working in a school for homeless children. Poor things! They need all one can give them. It has not been as uninteresting as it sounds. Everything is so new and strange.

"But you, when are you coming back to your kind, Mr. Exile? You must be wonderfully well after two years—and they are still waiting for you.

"Again my deepest gratitude for your hospitality to the shipwrecked."

Garth finished the letter with a groan of disappointment. "She's heard a fine tale from the family, and her brother's version wouldn't help it any," he muttered. "Doesn't speak of meeting them, though. She, in a school for homeless children—"

It was evident to Guthrie from the reserved tone of Joan Quarrier's letter that she had heard of his engagement to Ethel, and it was also quite as clear that she was ignorant of the color of the story Quarrier had retailed to Charles. To this, he realized, Joan Quarrier would give instant and flat denial but she was not even in Montreal—would never meet the Guthries. And after all, what did it matter? He was through with them—his smug brother, and the girl who had lost him when she stared in horror at his scarred cheek that day when the Royal Montreals came home.

He replaced the letter in the pocket of his shirt to be reread again and again with increasing disappointment—chagrin. He had hoped for something more personal—something of the Joan Quarrier he had known for five short days in September. But it was evident that she thought the factor of Elkwan not a free man. Well, he was now. Quarrier had done him an unintentional kindness in that lie—had forced Ethel's hand. Now he, Garth, could accept her release. Then what?

Far into the night Guthrie sat and smoked, but when he blew out the candle, he was no nearer a solution of his problem. Joan Quarrier had been right when she feared that a lonely Christmas awaited the exile at Elkwan. It did—a Christmas gray because a thousand miles of forest separated Garth Guthrie from a girl whose hair the moon once touched with silver dust on the cliffs of the Albany.

Cutting Down the Sweet Gum

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

CLARENCE GREEN brought us the little tree from southern Illinois years ago when he was staying at our house and when we were getting the yard into some sort of shape and planting out more trees and shrubs by 100 per cent than could possibly thrive in such close quarters. He recommended our planting it because he said that the foliage would be beautiful in the fall after the first frost had struck it. He was quite right, for there are few trees in this climate with more glorious autumn foliage than the sweet gum.

But the tree was badly placed. It grows slowly, and an elm nearby soon overshadowed and dwarfed it. The sweet gum, trying to get into the sunlight, grew crooked and lopsided. We talked for a time of moving it into a more favorable place, but since it could be done at any time it was never done, and then it was too big to move.

"I believe I'll cut down the sweet gum," I said to Nancy. "It will never amount to anything under that elm, and besides it is pushing the elm all out of shape." It was in August when I made the suggestion.

"Oh, don't cut it down now," Nancy pleaded. She looks on trees almost the same as if they were human beings. Even a box elder shedding its leaves almost before they are opened, or a poplar scattering catkins and dead branches about the yard appeals to her. "It will soon be October, and you know how beautiful it is then. Beside, I don't know that I ever want it cut down."

I dismissed the matter, and the tree, growing on, leaned over sidewise and tried to push itself into the light. A year or two later I brought up the subject again.

"I suppose it will never amount to anything there," Nancy admitted, "but I can't bear to see it cut down. I can't bear to see any tree cut down. If you must do it, cut it when I am some somewhere."

She doesn't go very often unless I am with her, and when she does I never think about the tree. When cutting it down occurs to me it is usually the wrong time; in winter the tree never attracts any attention, and in summer it seems such a short time until its leaves will be scarlet and gold that I give t another brief reprieve.

Wilfred was cleaning up the yard in June, and trimming things that needed to be trimmed. He had the ax sharpened, the more easily to accomplish his purposes.

"I wish you'd cut down that sweet gum," I said to him. "It is under the elm and it will never develop properly. I have been intending to do it for a long time."

"I'll do it next week when I come back," he said.

It was a relief to me to have it off my mind. We had been discussing the matter for ten or a dozen years, and now it seemed as if we might be getting somewhere.

"I had a letter from father," Wilfred informed me at the end of the week. "I'm sorry, but I'll not be able to do any more work, for I have to go home."

And the sweet gum is not yet cut down. I suppose I shall have to do it myself.

PARALYSIS SPREAD ALARMS

Washington.—Are we on the verge of another infantile paralysis epidemic like that of 1916? Late summer and early fall are the times when this little understood disease is most prevalent, but the number of cases reported to the United States public health service in the last few weeks have shown a decided gain over those reported for the same period last year.

The figures for the week ending August 6 show 180 cases as opposed to only 66 for the corresponding week of 1926. Ohio reports several widely scattered cases, while California has 66 for one week alone.

Like influenza, poliomyelitis, as infantile paralysis is known to medical men, is one of the unfinished problems on which scientists are still hard at work. It is believed to be caused by a filterable virus, which is spread by contact with articles that have been touched by the infected person. From the way in which epidemics have spread in the past it is thought that it must be transferred either by animals or human carriers, but at this time little has been definitely established on this point.

In the big epidemic in New York city that occurred eleven years ago it was clearly shown that prompt hospitalization of all cases that could be safely moved checked the spread of the disease more effectively than any other measure. Another outstanding point that emerged from this experience was the fact that isolation of groups of children from contact with other children or adults, even when carried out in the midst of areas where the disease was prevalent, sufficed to protect almost absolutely from infection.

At the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research attempts have been made to immunize monkeys to poliomyelitis but the results were too variable to be useful.

French workers have tried to use pieces of dried spinal cord after the same procedure as that followed in rabies treatment, but the results were too uncertain to be practical. Dr. E. C. Rosenow of the Mayo clinic has used an antistreptococcos serum to treat acute cases, but this has not received any general application.

Birds Select National Capital for Their Annual Convention

Washington.—Thousands of feathery members of the Purple Martin society have flocked to Washington from nearby states for their annual convention, preparatory to embarking on their usual winter tour of South America.

The birds have selected as their meeting place the wires atop the poles on Floral street, between Thirteenth street and Alaska avenue, where they hold early morning and night sessions to the wonderment of residents of the vicinity and motorists who stop their machines to watch them.

The other morning they rested side by side on the wires for a distance of two blocks, later taking off for an inspection tour and "bird's-eye" view of the city. In the evening they return again and one of these mornings they are going to adjourn suddenly and begin their flight southward, according to Dr. C. W. Richmond of the division of birds, Smithsonian institution.

Doctor Richmond points out that the martins seem to have selected the national capital as an annual meeting place in the late summer. In previous years they have held their sessions at different points around town, one year selecting the elm trees near the Pan-American building, another year using the trees near the botanic garden and still another year meeting on Rhode Island avenue in the northeast section.

"After assembling from nearby places and from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and other sections near Washington, they usually hang around for a few days before suddenly taking off in one group for the South," Doctor Richmond stated. "They will take up winter quarters probably in South America. Sometimes they number from 10,000 to 20,000 birds, according to various estimates."

While the exact date of departure of the visitors on Floral street can only be guessed, it appeared certain that leaders of the flock will see that the migration begins before the hunting season opens.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Millions of Planets

Stars of the Milky Way, which forms a great circle all of which we cannot see, are numbered by millions and every one is a sun like ours—some larger, some smaller. It is entirely possible that these suns have world's circling about them as we do about our sun. If so, there are hundreds of millions of planets.

TELEVISION NOT YET PERFECTED

New York.—Forty thousand electric impulses a second, riding wireless waves which travel 186,000 miles a second—that is radio television today, and still it is not fast enough to be practical.

Now that the transatlantic beam radio transmission and television have been accomplished, laymen may regard it as a short step to the time when scenes and speeches from a Geneva peace conference can be carried into their homes.

But the scientists and engineers who are intrusted with the task of bringing about something of that sort are doubtful. They point out a multitude of obstacles, and say that general use of television, especially for big scenes, may never be practical. Yet while they doubt they are industriously attempting to remove the obstacles of television for such practical organizations as the Radio Corporation of America and the American Bell Telephone company.

Beam transmission for messages and photographs is not only practical; it is in actual use for messages from London to Cape Town, Canada and Australia. This autumn the Radio corporation will put a beam line into operation between London and New York, in addition to its "undirected" broadcasting lines.

But the beam, which takes only about one-fourth as much power as generally radiated broadcasting, is not the slim pencil of energy visualized by amateur prophets. It is rather a cone, which spreads so much in traveling 3,000 miles across the Atlantic that nobody really knows how broad it is at the base.

The power picked up at the end of the line is too weak to overcome interference sufficiently for flawless work in the delicate task of transmitting scenes of persons and things in motion—but that is probably one of the minor obstacles which will be dissolved with time. Increased speed of transmission may prove to be the real solution of the problem.

The Radio corporation has machines which can send and receive 250 words per minute, about eight times as many as the human operators can send and receive, over ether waves that travel with the speed of light. This speed of transmission gives secrecy to messages.

But television requires a speed that makes 250 words a minute seem nothing at all. Using a transmitter that would fill a fair sized room—and size of equipment is one of the minor obstacles to commercial television at present—the best available apparatus of the Bell Telephone laboratories manages to transmit over wires or ether waves a picture about three inches square. Engineers consider this far too small a space to portray a king's coronation or a football game.

The three-inch picture consists of 2,500 dots of light and darkness, flashed on the screen separately, but so fast that the eye seems to see them all at once. To get motion into the picture, at least sixteen slightly different scenes must be flashed on the screen each second, each reproduced from the source by a separate electrical impulse. The dots have been enlarged to a maximum that gives a blurred picture two feet square, but the picture loses clarity with each amplification.

To transmit these "dot" impulses, energy for synchronization of machines and for a conversation, requires facilities that would carry four to six telephone conversations. Enlargements would be possible by dividing a scene, for instance, into quarter sections, transmitting each section as a separate picture and then recombining them as a single view. But this would require four transmitters, with transmission facilities for sixteen to twenty telephone conversations, or, if sent by air, it would occupy the ether wave bands of sixteen radio stations, and it would transmit scenes one way only.

Greater speed in transmission, a speed so nearly incomprensible that it may never be attainable, is perhaps the secret of television on a broad scale. One hundred and sixty thousand impulses per second, each reproducing a spot of light or darkness, would theoretically give a picture four times as large, and more dots would give larger scenes in proportion. But cautious scientists refuse to say more than that it "might be possible," and that it "might solve this particular part of the whole problem." Meantime experts in the telephone laboratories are trying to find out just what needs to be done and what can be done to make television commercially practical.

World Leisure Seen "When Atom Is Split"

London.—In half a century or so hardly anyone will have any work to do, says Dr. Percy Buck, professor of music in the University of London.

"In 50 years from now every human being will have a vast amount of leisure on his hands," explained Doctor Buck to the university teachers attending the summer vacation lecture course.

"If once the atom is split—and that is bound to happen in a certain number of years—there will be no need for coal, gas, electric light, steam or anything else like that. Think of it! We will be able to run a train from London to Edinburgh for half a penny, and to light the whole of London or New York for less than one single penny."

Hunting From Automobile

One of the sporting pastimes of Texas is shooting coyotes from automobiles on the prairies. A northerner who has just returned from the Lone Star state has the following to say: "It is great sport to hunt coyotes with a high powered car. They run on the prairie and can't get away unless they escape into the timber. They are fleet, but of course they can't outrun a car. I've shot them from a car going fifty miles an hour."

Popularity Foe to Brains

The reason that popular college youths do not get as high marks as the bookworms is not, as commonly believed, just that they do not care to work as hard, but that they are likely to rate lower in brain power, reports Dr. W. H. Sheldon of tests made at the University of Chicago.

However, brains and outstanding leadership seemed to go together. The notion that large-bodied men rank higher in sociability than thin men, but lower in scholarship and intelligence, appeared to have some support from the figures.—Hygeia Magazine.

SCHOOL DISTRICT NAMED IN DAMAGE SUIT

Maria Kennedy and her husband, James P. Kennedy, have brought an action in the Superior court against San Mateo County the Jefferson School District, San Mateo Red Cross Chapter to recover damages for injuries received in an automobile accident and John Doe in the sum of $65,000.

The complaint recites that last year Mrs. Kennedy was riding in a car owned by the Jefferson School District and driven by John Doe, whose true name she does not know, and at Beresford the machine was turned over and she was thrown and severely injured.

Mrs. Kennedy presented a claim to the supervisors on June 4 last and same was rejected. The other defendants also refused to settle the bill. Mrs. Kennedy asks $50,000 for damages for her injuries. James Kennedy had to give up his work and perform his wife's duties, and was compelled to become indebted for large sums of money the complaint alleges, for which he asks $15,000. James Brennan of San Francisco is the attorney for defendants.

Arkush Entertainment circuit and will take the place of the Sequoia theatre here operated by the same concern.

"Many automobile accidents can be attributed to defective headlight equipment," said James B. Logan captain of the State Traffic Squad, who is co-operating with the California Public Safety Conference in a drive of the month on illegal headlights.

Mr. Logan points out two evils which seem to predominate at night; one is driving with glaring headlight and the other with only one headlight. Driving with only one headlight is perhaps the more dangerous practice, since it is impossoble to tell if a motor cycle or an automobile is approaching. This is especially true when it is the left hand light which is out. Logan urges all motorists to take especial pains during this month to see that headlight equipment complies with the law.

OPTOMETERIST OPENS OFFICE WITH REINHARD CO

Dr. A. M. McLeod, a graduate in optometry from the University of California, and for the past year a registered practising optometerist in Oakland, is now registered in Redwood City and located with Reinhard & Co., jewelers at 25 Broadway. Dr. McLeod has installed full equipment to serve in the correction of defective vision. Previous to entering University of California Dr. McLeod was a spectacle optician in San Francisco and thoroughly understands the mechanical work of making any and all types of eye glasses as well s being a professional optometerist.

Students of optometry and ophthalmolgy have known for almost a century that the human eye is very imperfect optically but with the aid of lens correctly prescribed and fitted, can be rendered capable of properly serving the owner. Dr. McLeod states that while more people are forced to use glasses now than ever before it is not because the human eye is deteriorating but only because present day living demands more of the human eye.

An eye with a marked optical defect puts a strain on the complicated structure of the eye and such strain is often transmitted to the central nervous system, setting up disturbances in other parts of the anatomy. It is also true that abnoraml conditions in other parts of the body often produce eye disturbances. A qualified optometerist can advise what may be the eye troubles and also tions of the eyes are voluntary one is often of any eye disturbance ing their eyes examined.

The family physician ist know that there good reasons for a periodical and dental examsurely a person should eyes examined in physically fit.
